Description:

The aim of the course is to build on the skills that students acquired in previous communication courses and to further enhance their writing and speaking competence in preparation for more advanced major courses as well as the future workplace. In Unit 1, students will practice how to conduct close reading of a novel and generate thoughtful thesis statements and topic sentences for the analytical essay. Feedback from peers and teachers will enable students to identify areas for improvement and further polish their writing skills.

Next in Unit 2, we look ahead to job applications and interviews. The course will provide guidance to students for writing their resume and the accompanying cover letter with the purpose of highlighting their strengths, accomplishments and aspirations. In the last part of the course, we will discuss how to prepare for interviews and conduct practice to hone students' self-presentation skills. It is hoped that by the end of the course, students can become competent and confident users of English across a variety of contexts and for different purposes.

Learning objectives:

After completing this course, students should be able to:

- i) Become a more confident user of English and a more effective communicator;
- ii) Write clearly and coherently about literary texts, conduct close-reading of texts, and generate solid thesis statements and topic sentences;
- iii) Write cover letters and resumes that can accentuate the candidate's compatibility and have proper formatting and diction;
- iv) Perform in interviews and give a professional and poised account of one's educational background, work experience and career aspirations.

Units

1. Novel

As students engage in the novel, they will learn how to conduct close reading, generate questions for meaningful discussion, examine characters and themes, and articulate their interpretation of the literary work in both speech and writing.

2. Applications and interviews	Through practice and feedback, students will learn how to prepare for job interviews and present a convincing case of their strengths and abilities. Students will also find a real-life job advertisement and learn how to write a resume and an accompanying cover letter to apply to the job.
